may be done during the present session of the Legislature for the benefit of the University of the State. One of the proposed amendments to the Constitution looks to this end. But whether it passes or not, some helping hand should be extended to this institution.

We have very recently presented in these columns the deplorable condition in which the University is: how its Libraries and valuable Cabinet of Minerals are being scattered; how its buildings and grounds are being destroyed. It is time, now, that some thing should be done to stop further destruction, and to make it again not only a self-sustaining institution, but a blessing to the State. And it can be done if it can be withdrawn from the dirty pool of politics, where it should never have been cast.

If his party friends will show the same spirit which Governor Caldwell exhibited in ignoring political considerations in the appointment of a Superintendent of Public Instruction, the University can be restored, and its Campus will soon again resound with the voices of hundreds of students. If we can only be rid of those who have fastened themselves upon it until place its future destinies under the care of those who will have the confidence and support of the moral, social and business sentiment of the State and the South, we will see those buildings peopled again with the best and the people there would much Will Senators only carry themselves from the influence of the clergy the Edgecombe Female Seminary, young men of the country, and the prefer the Road to be sold at once and back to the time and scene of this out-University will become again the pride to pass into the hands of capitalists, rage, make themselves neighbors and of the State.

The two houses assembled at a late hour in the day and the formal message of the abdication of King Amadeus was read in each chamber separately. It opens with the statement that the King has maturely considered the question of what course he ought to pursue with reference to the Spanish throne, and has firmly resolved upon that course. That when he accepted the crown he did so under the belief about $4,000 of the $7,000 needed to that the loyalty of the people who had called him, would compensate for the inexperience which he brought to his task. He had found that herein he was deceived. If the enemies who had be would not have taken the course now determined upon, but they are Spaniards; by them Spain had been kept in perpetual disquiet. All his efforts to quiet her or to put an end to the intrigues which were the source of her agitation had proved unavailing. It was not enough that he had partizan support.
